inevitably reminds one of these tremendous lines of Tennyson:

When the centuries behind me like a fruitful land reposed, When I clung to all the present for the promise that it closed, When I dipped into the future far as human eye could see, Saw the vision of the world and all the wonder that would be."

Jack London, beginning his remarkable description of mankind "Before Adam," pushes human recollection far back before the days of earliest recorded history; Charles Edward Russell, seeking in Australia further "Soldiers of the Common Good," seems to snatch the veil from an almost imminent millennium, while in between the teeming, busy, restless, resistless present is presented in many a tale, such as "The Thief Takers of Paris," by Vance Thompson; "Help! Help! Help!" the old problem of domestic service, by Roy L. McCardell; Hughes and Jerome contrasted, by Frank H. Simonds, and "The Strings of Liberty," a story of bitter, biting, passionate realism, by Maximilian Foster. It makes a wide, broad and deep magazine, but such must a magazine be which claims to be
